THIS WEEK'S BIG READ: ROBOSPORTS

Back in April, a half marathon in Beijing made the headlines. Why? Because for the first time, "humanoid" robots took part in a race alongside human runners. 21 robots joined in, with the winner completing the course in two hours and 40 minutes. To take part, the robots had to be able to walk or run - no wheels were allowed!

Now, robots in sport have made the news again: this time, for kick-boxing. The robots went head-to-head in the competition, which was held in Hangzhou, China. It was the first combat sports event featuring humanoid robots. Click the image to see them in action.
